

Got your back, pt. 2

A thoughtful moment in Buttodown. Gmail's truncation has been going on for decades, and I have no idea why they still do this. Even the overflow interface for a truncated email is awful – the rest of it doesn't appear in situ, but it opens a new window that where you have to start from the top.

So it's nice that Buttodown warns you about it.

 2143 words written

Gmail truncates emails over 102kb; yours is 104kb. This can harm deliverability and skew your open rate.

Newer

Older

30th December 2025

"Confusing, distracting, and aes...

29th December 2025

A tiny bit old Windows got right

Marcin Wichary © 2022-2025

Archive RSS feed Mastodon Email QR Code

Made with Montaigne and by anton 